

SPECIAL VENIRE FOR CLARK TRIAL

Alleged Murdered of McQuaid, Brothers Will be Tried Before Shelby County Jury.

CASE WILL BEGIN NEXT MONDAY

Seba A. Barnes, of This City, is Leading Counsel for Defendant—Evidence Will be Watched.

Clerk Leon Cox, of Bartholomew county, has received from the clerk of the Shelby circuit court the names of the special venire of twenty-five men from whom will be selected the jury to try J. Rufus Clark for the alleged murder of Charles and John McQuaid, aged brothers, in Jennings county, October 29, 1912. The attorneys for the defendant took advantage of the law which provides that the jury may be drawn from an adjoining county and Judge Wickens named Shelby county.

The venire was drawn under a late law which provides that the names shall be drawn in public. The Shelby county clerk sent notices to the attorneys for the state and defense to this effect. Seba A. Barnes, of this city, is leading counsel for Clark and the prosecution is in charge of Prosecuting Attorney Joseph Verburg, of Jennings county, assisted by William Fitzgerald, of North Vernon, and several other lawyers.

The trial will begin Monday, April 28, and will continue for a week or ten days. Henry Romine was convicted of murder in connection with the same case and is serving a life sentence in the State Prison at Michigan City. The evidence, it is understood, will be somewhat similar, but the Clark trial will not be as long as the attorneys have been through the case one time and will be able to avoid much of the testimony given before.

The trial will attract much attention and the evidence will be watched closely. The men charged with the murder are well known in southern Indiana, and especially in this section. James Tyler, of North Vernon, is also charged with complicity in the murder, and his trial will be held some time in May.

Five counties are directly interested in the Clark trial. It will be held in Bartholomew county and the defendant is a resident of Jennings county. The McQuaids also lived in that county. Clark is well known in this county and has transacted business here. His attorney, Seba A. Barnes, also lives here. Shelby county furnishes the jury and is interested for that reason. Judge Wickens, before whom the case will be tried, is a resident of Decatur county, and the progress of the trial will be followed there. Clark was known in Scott and other counties in this section of the state.

The special venire drawn in Shelby county follows:

COUNTY ASSESSOR CROSS INSPECTS FLOOD DISTRICT

Finds Property to Amount of One Hundred Thousand Dollars Was Destroyed or Damaged.

County assessor, J. B. Cross has returned from a trip in the flood district in the west part of the county along the White River and estimates that property to the value of about $100,000 was destroyed and damaged in the recent flood. This will reduce the amount of taxable personal property this year as it is expected that quite a number of the tax payers effected will appear before the tax board and ask for a rebate as provided by law. The loss throughout the state will greatly reduce the amount of taxable property as compared to last year.

The law provides that in case of floods or other disaster over which the tax payers have no control, they may file an affidavit with the county auditor and receive a rebate of taxes, the amount to be proportioned to the time when the property was destroyed. Under the law all property in existence on March 1st will be assessed even though it was destroyed or damaged before the assessor listed it. It is further provided that the tax payers may then file an affidavit showing their loss and in this manner be relieved from paying taxes on property which they do not own.

BODIES OF TWO TRAINMEN DROWNED IN FLOOD FOUND

Located on Sandbar Near Washington—Were Almost Covered With Sand.

The bodies of Clifford Lemore, night yard-master of the B. & O. Southwestern Railway, at Washington, and Reason Jackson, a fireman, who were drowned several weeks ago when the engine plunged through the trestle over Blue Hole, White River, near Washington, have been found. They were located on a sandbar several miles from the point where they were drowned and were almost covered with sand.

The B. & O. Southwestern Company had divers at work for several days trying to locate the bodies but were unsuccessful. They were washed down the river by the current. The bodies of Daniel Schaffer, day yard-master, and Theodore Gharst, engineer, who lost their lives at the same time, have not been recovered. Search is being made along the banks of the river in hope of recovering them. Because of the swiftness of the current it is difficult to locate the bodies which may have been carried several miles.

RELIEF MONEY IS SENT TO FT. RITNER

Charity Organization Forwards Check for $30 for Assistance of Flood Victims.

REQUEST WAS MADE FOR HELP

Many Persons at Lawrenceburg Also in Distress and Will Receive Part of Fund.

A check for $30 was sent to Ft. Ritner today by the Seymour charity organization to be used in aiding persons there who lost practically all their property during the recent flood sometime ago. Inquiry was made of T. A. Holland, a prominent Ft. Ritner citizen, if any help was needed and he replied that while the Bedford Relief Committee was furnishing food and clothing, there were several families who were in need of money.

The amount sent to Ft. Ritner will be used to assist three parties. One is a blacksmith, who lost all of his tools in the flood and while he is anxious to begin work, he had no money to purchase the necessary equipment. Another man, who will share in the fund, lost everything in the high water and has been working at various employments in an effort to make some money but recently met with an accident in which one hand was injured. This prevented him from working and his family is in need of help. Part of the money will be used to assist another family that suffered heavily.

About $50 was given to the flood sufferers at Lawrenceburg where the conditions are very bad. Many families lost all their household furnishings and a few have no homes at all. Additional help may be given to Lawrenceburg later.

The charity organization intended to aid any families in Jackson county, who were in need first and then use the surplus money, if any, in helping persons outside of the county. An effort was made to learn of any families who were in need in this vicinity but no calls were made. The report that there is great suffering at Medora could not be verified and it appears that someone sent in a request to the governor, hoping to receive aid which was not really needed.

The charity organization will publish a report, showing how the money was expended as soon as the last contribution is made. Mr. Holland to whom the money was sent at Ft. Ritner informed the local charity organization that he would send them a receipt with definite information in a few days.

George W. McPike, of Indianapolis, has purchased the chicken farm just north of the city owned by Will L. Clark for $3,500. Mr. Clark will take in exchange a seven room modern rental in Indianapolis. Mr. McPike will move here at once. He is a traveling salesman and as his territory is in southern Indiana he will find good railroad accommodations here. The deal was made by E. C. Bollinger.

SEASON TICKETS FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Until First Night Will be Sold for $1.50, Admitting Holder to all Entertainments.

ONE-HALF PRICE FOR CHILDREN

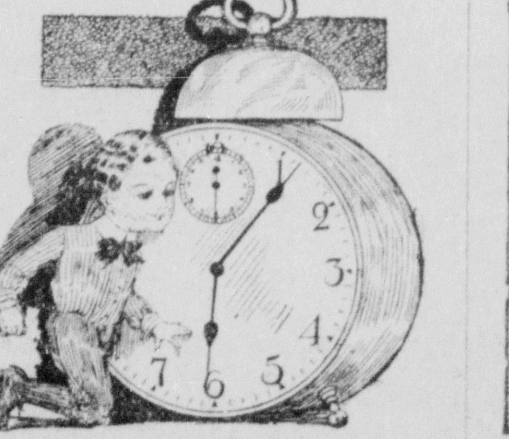

Tent Will be Raised on Sloping Ground to Afford Natural Elevation for All Seats.

The season tickets for the Seymour Chautauqua, which will be held August 23 to 31 at the city park, will be placed on sale next week. A special inducement to dispose of as many tickets as possible before the Chautauqua has been made by the committee and an opportunity to purchase them at a reduced price will be offered from the time the tickets are placed on sale until the first night of the chautauqua. The adult season tickets will cost $1.50 and tickets for children, between the ages of seven and fifteen years, will be sold at 75c. After August 23 the adult tickets will be sold for $2.00 and the children's tickets for $1.00. It is essential that the committee know as nearly as possible how many tickets will be sold and all persons who intend to buy season tickets are urged to purchase them at the earliest date.

Season tickets will admit the holders to enter and leave the grounds at any time during the day and will also furnish admission to the tent. Single tickets will be sold for 25c for each entertainment. A number of special features have been arranged especially for children and for this reason it will be economy for them to purchase a ticket which will admit them to all the entertainments.

Arrangements have been made for the tent under which the entertainments will be given and it is estimated that it has a seating capacity of between 2,500 and 3,000. The tent is 100x140 feet and will be erected at a suitable place in the city park. It has been decided to place the tent on sloping ground, so that a natural elevation will be afforded for the seats. In this manner all persons in the tent will be able to get a direct view of the stage and it will be much better than if the seats were on level ground. The stage will be built several feet above the ground.

The program committee has received word from the Lyceum Bureau that Senator Gore, who was to give a lecture here, will be unable to fill his engagement because of the special session of Congress. Senator Gore has notified the Lyceum that he will be unable to fill his contract with them this year. The bureau has assured the committee, however, that another strong speaker will be secured in place of Senator Gore and the name will be announced in a short time. The program for the week's entertainment here is practically completed and will be ready for publication in a few days. Those who have charge of the Chautauqua are especially pleased with the entertainment provided and believe that it will meet with the approval of a great majority of people of this vicinity. An effort was made to arrange a program that would interest everyone and it was with this view in mind that the various lecturers, musical companies and readers have been selected. The entertainment on the first night will be free.

The advertising committee intends to advertise the Chautauqua widely during the next two months and it is believed that quite a number of visitors from adjoining counties will be here. Some of them intend to spend the week in Seymour as it is their best opportunity to attend a Chautauqua.

Arrangements have been made to light the park with electricity during the week and a number of persons are expecting to camp on the grounds while the Chautauqua is in session. In many places Chautauqua Week is regarded as an outing week and many persons spend the entire time on the grounds.

WIDOW AND THREE CHILDREN LEFT DESTITUTE BY FLOOD

Aid Given Mrs. Anna Rothoff by Members of Christian Church and Charity Organization.

Mrs. Anna Rothoff and three children of Augusta, Ky., who lost everything they owned in the recent flood, are in the city and are being cared for by the members of the Christian church and the charity organization. After the flood the family started to Cincinnati, but before they reached that place the husband was fatally stricken with heart trouble and died a short time afterwards. The widow and her three children completed their journey to Cincinnati and were there given transportation to Louisville. Mrs. Rothoff intended to go to Henryville where she expected to receive assistance from her daughter. She claims that her son-in-law would not help them and would not even give them a meal.

Persons who became interested in the family bought their tickets to Seymour. Sunday they appealed to the members of the Christian church and a collection was raised for their benefit. Rooms have been rented and some furniture donated by persons who were acquainted with the situation. The daughters, who are fifteen and twelve years of age, declare they are anxious to find employment. The son is only eight years old. Anyone desiring to give provisions to the family are requested to inform Rev. E. L. Pettus.

DOG CASE TRIED BY JURY IN LAWRENCE CIRCUIT COURT

Defendant Fined $5 and Costs For Alleged Acts of Cruelty to the Animal.

The State case against W. D. Bohall, charged with cruelty to animals, was tried in the Lawrence circuit court Monday by a jury, who found the defendant guilty and his fine was fixed at $5 and costs. The case was appealed to the circuit court from the Mayor's court and was venued to Lawrence county. A C. Branaman represented the defendant.

The defendant contended that he was not guilty of cruelty to animals and struck a dog, belonging to a neighbor, with a pitchfork when it attacked his grandchild. The dog was known as a vicious animal he said, and he used the fork to protect the child. The state claimed that he killed the dog with the pitchfork when it was not necessary to do so and that he also tortured the animal.

KILLED HIS WIFE AND SHOT HIMSELF

William Willard, a Mitchell Carpenter, Committed Suicide After Murderous Act.

CRAZED BY HEAVY DRINKING

Called at Home of Mother-in-law While Intoxicated and Fired Five Shots Into Wife's Body.

William Willard, who was employed as a carpenter at Mitchell, shot and killed his wife at the home of her mother at that place Monday and when pursued by the officers turned the pistol upon himself and fired five shots into his brain. The police were within hearing distance of the shot fired when he committed suicide, but he was dead when they reached him. He was forty years of age, and lived at Mitchell for several years.

The cause of the tragedy is said to have been domestic trouble, and that the couple had had some difficulty several times recently. Willard had been drinking heavily for several days and about noon went to the home of his mother-in-law where he found his wife assisting her in house cleaning. They had a few words and without warning, Willard pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired five shots into his wife's body. She died almost instantly.

Before leaving the house he reloaded his revolver, and started towards the outskirts of the town. The officers were at once notified of the murder and started after him. He ran several blocks and when the police were a short distance from him he pulled the revolver from his pocket and fired five times. Several of the shots took effect. The man was dead and lying in a pool of blood when the police reached his side.

The wife was a highly respected woman in that community. A sad feature of the tragedy is that seven children survive, the youngest being but two years old, and the oldest is seventeen.

ENDED LIFE OF WIFE AND SELF

Discord Leads to a Double Tragedy at Mitchell.

BOTH WERE INSTANTLY KILLED

Domestic Trouble in the Home of William Willard, a Carpenter, Magnified by the Drunken Imagination of the Man, Prompted Willard to Seek His Wife at the Home of Her Mother and There Kill Her and Himself.

Mitchell, Ind., April 22.—William Willard, a carpenter, forty years old, shot and killed his wife at the home of her mother in this city, then, eluding the officers who had gone to arrest him, committed suicide by firing five shots into his brain.

The cause of the tragedy is said to have been domestic troubles. Willard had been drinking for several days, and went to the home of his mother-in-law, where he found his wife assisting her mother in cleaning house.

They quarreled, and, pulling an automatic revolver from his pocket, Willard fired five shots into his wife's body. She was killed instantly. Willard then reloaded his revolver, and before officers could arrest him ran to the outskirts of the city and fired five shots into his head. He was dead when the officers reached him.

A family of seven children, ranging from two to seventeen years old, survives.

Indianapolis Prisoner's Clever Ruse Secures His Freedom.

Indianapolis, April 22.—Working the clever ruse of substituting his coat and hat to imitate the form which should have been in his bed, and thus deceiving the night watchman, Albert Britton, who is under a grand jury indictment charging burglary, escaped from the police ward of the city hospital and is still at large. Britton left the building by removing a screen from a window.

Britton was arrested Feb. 17 in connection with the robbery of a drug store and was later indicted by the grand jury. He apparently became ill April 14 while in jail and was permitted to go to the city hospital. He was supposed to be suffering a nervous breakdown.

The escape was not discovered until an orderly at the hospital began the morning roll call. Britton did not answer. A form supposedly his was seen beneath the covers of his cot and the orderly called a second time. When no answer was received the covers were raised, disclosing the ruse.

PUPILS IGNORE THE DECISION OF JURY

Pittsburg Youngsters Have Their Opinion of Heeter.

Pittsburg, April 22.—Shortly after the noon recess yesterday a gigantic demonstration among the school children of this city against Superintendent of Schools S. L. Heeter started and resulted in many hundreds of pupils refusing to return to the afternoon session, while hundreds of others formed into lines of march and paraded the streets bearing banners with such inscriptions as "Kick Heeter Out," "Down with the Rascal," etc.

The return of Superintendent Heeter to his position, from which he secured a leave of absence previous to his trial on charges of adultery and abortion following a statement made by Ethel Fisher, a former servant in his home, was not known until after the noon recess by the pupils throughout the different schools in the city. Immediately the demonstration and strike began. A general strike is feared.

At 8 o'clock last night police headquarters received a hurry call for detectives to be rushed to the home of Superintendent Heeter immediately, as a hostile demonstration was in progress in the street in front of his home.

Allies Accept Conditions.

The New 1913 Rengo Belt Reducing Corsets

are beautiful examples of the scientific reduction of stout and medium figures.

No other corsets ever have or ever will have, the wonderful value that is represented in the great strength and wearing qualities of these new 1913 models. By their extra strength, their shapeliness will be retained long after other weaker corsets have stretched and gone to pieces.

The new models introduce abdominal reducing features strikingly simple, successful and comfortable. In addition to the famous Rengo Belt reinforcement over the abdomen, we have added this season special wide elastic webbing, which automatically reduces the excess flesh and gives an upward support that is most comforting to the wearer. This elastic webbing affords perfect freedom and particularly gives comfort in the sitting position.

All models are boned with double watch-spring steel and guaranteed not to rust.

A NEW ANTI-JAPANESE BILL

Secretary of State's Request That the Coast Legislature Cease From Attempted Discrimination Against the People of Nippon Is Answered by a Movement Looking to Exclusion of All Asiatics From the Golden Gate.

Sacramento, Cal., April 22.—An anti-alien land law which will bar out all Asiatics is to be drafted by the administration bodies in the state legislature. This action is a direct slap at Secretary of State Bryan, who requested the governor last week not to discriminate against the Japanese. The new bill will also be especially obnoxious to the Japanese, because it classes them with the Chinese Asiatics, when they claim to be Aryans, not Mongolians.

The new bill will be a substitute for the Thompson-Birdsall bill in the senate. It is understood the governor has sanctioned it and will promptly sign it after it has passed both houses. The administration has a good working majority in both houses in the legislature, and no member who expects any favors from the governor will dare oppose the measure.

The strong protests received from many banks, chambers of commerce and financial committees induced the legislators to drop the clause which barred all foreign-owned corporations from doing business in California.

Whether this new bill will be constitutional or not does not worry the legislature. The legislators say all they care for is to pass a bill which will keep Japanese from increasing their ownership of land in California.

Senator Boynton, president pro tem of the senate and administration floor leader of the upper house, gave out the following interview in explanation of his views on the land bill:

"I believe the people of California desire an alien land law that will have the effect of preventing their agricultural and residential lands from passing into the hands of the Japanese and Chinese, and such a law should be passed."

"It must not be so sweeping in character, however, as to exclude all aliens. California should welcome the farmers of Europe and Canada, also the capital investments of these peoples, and I believe it would be a mistake to bar these people and that capital, simply to bar the Japanese and Chinese."

"No good purpose can be served in this case by passing a general law. It should state its object, as desired by the people of California, and stop there."

WALTER H. PAGE.

Named as New American Ambassador to Great Britain.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Washington, April 22.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: Walter H. Page, as ambassador to Great Britain; Dudley Field Malone as second assistant secretary of state; John Bassett Moore, as counselor of the state department, and John E. Osborne of Wyoming as assistant secretary of state.

ENGLISH LAW WILL ADJUST THE CLAIMS

Important Ruling In the Titanic Cases.

New York, April 22.—In the United States district court Judge Holt has decided that the liability of the White Star line for death and property claims resulting from the sinking of the Titanic is to be determined by the laws of England and that the company cannot take advantage of the very small limitation allowed by the laws of the United States. Unless Judge Holt is reversed by the United States circuit court of appeals or by the United States supreme court, the Titanic claimants will have an opportunity to recover at least $3,000,000. If the court had held that the liability was to be determined by the laws of this country, the company would have been exempted from paying more than $97,000.

While Judge Holt's opinion is a decided victory for the claimants, the fight has only begun. The White Star line will appeal either to the circuit court of appeals or to the supreme court, holding that Judge Holt's decision is against all weight of precedent and is contrary to established international law.

On the other hand counsel for 135 Titanic claimants, whose arguments were approved by Judge Holt, said they would not be satisfied to accept even the English rule of liability unless nothing else was left for them at the end of their fight. They purpose, they said, to fight for the full amount of all claims on the ground that the disaster to the Titanic was the result of the negligence of the company or of the company's agents. Meanwhile they hold that their clients will get at least $3,000,000 allowed by the English law.

Judge Holt's decision sustains exceptions taken by claimants to the petition of the steamship company, that the company's liability be limited to the value of its interest in the steamship at the end of the voyage, as the American law provides.

Paterson, N. J., April 22.—The big mass meeting arranged by the American Federation of Labor in the hope of starting a movement to end the strike of silk weavers and dyers of Paterson, which has now lasted for eight weeks, was stamped twice by the Industrial Workers of the World. Bill Haywood himself led 2,000 of his followers out the first time; the police were forced to clear the hall the second time, and after that, although the police inspected those who went back into the Fifth regiment armory, where the meeting was held, boots, curses and catcalls greeted the speakers.

LATEST MOVE TO PUSH WAR GAME

College Boys to Receive Free Military Instruction.

TWO TRIAL CAMPS ARRANGED

War Department Has Planned to Create a Volunteer Reserve Force Upon Which to Draw For Commissioned Officers in Time of Need, College Students Being Asked to Give Their Vacation to Studying War.

Washington, April 22.—College undergraduates may receive military instruction in camp this summer at little expense to themselves, under a plan which is being laid before the students and officials of the principal universities of the country by General Wood, chief of staff of the army, acting for Secretary of War Garrison. The general arrangements for putting into effect this novel and revolutionary idea, which originated with General Wood, are now practically completed and the war department is rapidly going ahead with the plan.

It is proposed to establish this summer two experimental camps, solely for the college man, one in the east and the other in the west. Student soldiers to the number of 2,000 will be taken to Gettysburg immediately after the joint encampment early this summer, and about 500 more will be encamped at the Presidio of Monterey, Cal. The period of instruction will be about eight weeks.

It is proposed to build up, if possible, a great body of well educated young men who shall have acquired some military instruction through these camps and then draw upon them in time of war, as material for commissioned officers of the volunteer troops. The young men will be instructed in such things as enter into the conduct of an actual battle rather than an exhibition drill. The students will receive uniform outfits and the regular army rifles, but no one will pay any attention to how he steps or how he carries his gun, so long as he gets into his head the first principles of what he is about.

The exercises in the field will be varied frequently with lectures on military subjects by the best officers available for the purpose in the United States army. The college men will be taught the elements of camp sanitation and the care of large bodies of men in the field and on the march.

JEALOUS OF ITS DIGNITY

House Does Not Lightly Pass Assault on a Member.

Washington, April 22.—The house of representatives adopted a resolution providing for the immediate investigation of the circumstances leading up to and including the attack upon Representative Thetus W. Sims by Charles G. Glover, president of the Riggs National bank of Washington, last Friday. Designating the case of Representative Sims as a matter of the highest privilege, Representative Garrett, his colleague, brought the matter to the attention of the house and the measure was adopted after a brief debate.

The special committee began its sittings this morning at 10:30. Among the witnesses summoned was Admiral Dewey, who was a witness to the spirited encounter between the two old gentlemen in Farragut Squire park.

WHOLE COUNTIES FLOODED

Immense Property Loss Occasioned by Broken Levees on the Mississippi.

New Orleans, April 22.—A great crevasse more than 300 feet wide, which occurred several miles north of the town of Mayersville, Miss., will flood all of Sharkey and Issaquena counties and nearly all of Washington and Warren.

This part of the country is rich in cotton farms and is well settled. Conservative estimates place the number who will be rendered homeless at 15,000 and the property losses at several million dollars. Rain is threatening all along the lower river section and grave fears are entertained for the weakened levee at other points.

PRESIDENT WILSON GOING BACK HOME

Jersey Legislators Are In for Some Straight Talk.

Washington, April 22.—On May 1 President Wilson will go to New Jersey to participate in the fight for the enactment of a jury reform law. He will speak at Paterson on that date and at Jersey City on May 2. Mr. Wilson will demand that the special session of the New Jersey legislature called to assemble May 8 enact a jury reform law which measures up to his ideas of the pledge carried in the last state Democratic platform.

It is at President Wilson's suggestion that Governor Fielder has called a special session of the legislature to enact a jury reform law and to issue a call for a constitutional convention which was pledged in the state platform.

Reports have reached the White House that the president's campaign in New Jersey will be fruitless and that it will not result in the enactment of a jury reform law in conformity with Mr. Wilson's ideas. The president's New Jersey friends have brought to Washington the news that the Smith-Nugent forces apparently will succeed in maintaining their organization in opposition to the proposed reform at a strength sufficient to bring about a second deadlock such as resulted in the defeat of all the jury reform bills at the regular session.

This campaign will be typical of Mr. Wilson's past political fights in New Jersey. He will talk over the heads of the legislators whom he considers recalcitrant to the people themselves.

FARMER SAID FREE SEEDS
MADE GOOD CHICKEN FEED
Lawrenceburg Tells Congressman
Dixon That He Can Use Several Packages At Once.

These are busy days for Representative Dixon. He is kept busy complying with requests for free seeds. Every mail from the west brings in hundreds of letters from Indians requesting him to send them some seeds. The majority of them desire to start a garden, although some of those that write for free seeds, wish to use them for poultry food.

Mr. Dixon has a constituent who lives on a farm near Lawrenceburg who makes an annual demand for seeds. He wrote Mr. Dixon the other day.

"The seeds make a No. 1 chicken feed," he said, "and as the recent high water washed away most of my supply of poultry food I want you to hurry along the seeds. You remember you fitted me out with flower seeds last year. I want you to send me vegetable seeds this year. The chickens seem to like the taste of them better."

While the congress was considering the agricultural bill last February Senator Kenyon obtained the adoption of an amendment abolishing the free distribution of seeds. The senate stood out strongly in favor of this amendment, and the public got the impression that the ancient and accepted custom of sending broadcast free seeds had been abolished. But the house took another view of the matter.

EXPECT DECISION TODAY
Interest Shown in Outcome of Train-men's Demands.
New York, April 22.—Great interest is shown over the decision in the arbitration of the wage controversy between the firemen and the fifty-four Eastern railroads of the country which is expected to be given out today. There will be an appetl from this decision. The date for the announcement has extended three weeks beyond the original time, because of the large number of subjects that had to be considered. Both sides shared equally the expense of the extention, the Government having footed the bills up to the term allowed by the Erdman law for reaching a decision in such disputes.

The wage demands of the trainmen and conductors were presented last January. They are said to be for standard rates for men performing the same service on roads of similar grade, and include a demand for a 15 per cent. increase.

EUCCHARISTIC CONGRESS
Formal Opening of Business Session Was Impressive.
Valetta, Island of Malta, April 22.—The formal opening of the business session of the fourteenth International Eucharist Conference here today was most impressive. Mgr. Heylen, Bishop of Namur and President of the Permanent Committee of the Congress, celebrated the inaugural mass in the Rotunda Mustat, the third greatest cathedral in the world.
Considerable interest is attached to this assemblage of the Eucharistic Congress by virtue of the fact that it is held in the historic island, where, it is said, St. Paul the Apostle on his journey to Rome to be tried before Caesar, was shipwrecked with his Roman Captors. Added to this distinguishing feature is another still more interesting, as it is more authentic. For it was in the island of Malta that the Knights of St. John, said by some to be the forerunners of the Knights Templars accomplished their greatest work.
The city of Valetta, where the congress is being held, is named for the grand master La Valetta, who in the last attempt of the Turks to capture the island in 1565 saved the city after a siege of eight months and routed the formidable enemy with a handful of men. Among the objects of interest are the fortifications erected under La Valetta. Had it not been for these fortifications and the valor of the knights the Mediterranean probably would be controlled now by the Ottoman Empire.
It was Napoleon, finally reduced the knights to condition for surrender. They rebelled and with the assistance of George III. of England cast out both the knights and the French in the year 1814.
Valetta offers the traveller many interesting sights suggestive of Malta's romantic past. Its civic and ecclesiastical history being almost inseparable, the city naturally presents the spectacle of beautiful buildings. Conspicuous among these is the Church of St. John. In this cathedral the knights of every station decorated their respective chapels and erected memorials to their grand masters.
In the Governor's palace, once the palace of the grand masters, is a collection of war relics dating from the crusades. The council chamber is hung with Gobelin tapestries. A public library founded in the last days of the knights' activities contains 60,000 volumes, many of which are rare. Here also is the cave where St. Paul and St. Luke are said to have lived now marked by a large church, still the principal shrine of the Maltese. In this church may be seen the celebrated Byzantine portraits in silver of St. Paul.

SHAKESPEARE'S BIRTHDAY
Dramatic Profession Will Observe Day Tomorrow.
Now York, April 22.—The dramatic profession and playgoers all over the United States will observe the birthday of Shakespeare tomorrow on a more extended plan than has been hitherto followed. This is due largely to the efforts of Ian Maclaren, the distinguished English actor, who has been making a tour of the United States in "The Daughter of Heaven," with Miss Viola Allen.
Says Maclaren, "In England this event is annually celebrated by commemoration performances, pageants and other appropriate ceremonies. This year dramatic companies in the United States will give special performances of Shakespeare's plays. It is hoped in the near future to start a fund for the erection of a Shakespeare's Museum in the United States."

PEACE DAY FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

May 18 Is Set Aside For Observance.

PROGRAMS ARE ARRANGED.

United States Bureau of Education Issues Bulletin Containing Directions and Suggestions For Celebration—Indications Are That Interest Will Be Widespread.

Peace day will be widely celebrated in schools throughout the United States this year. Although introduced but a few years ago, this special school day in behalf of international peace is now regularly celebrated in many American schools, and the indications are that its observance this year will be extended to thousands more.

Since May 18, the day set aside as peace day, falls on Sunday the schools will probably hold their exercises on the nearest school day.

Importance of Movement.
Realizing the growing importance of the peace movement among school children, the United States bureau of education has just issued a peace day bulletin for 1913 containing, besides a suggested program for the day, a number of interesting short articles on different phases of the international peace movement, accurate and comprehensive information about the various organizations working for peace and a collection of appropriate poems and prose quotations by famous peace lovers of many nations.

The material was compiled for the bureau by Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, secretary of the American School Peace League and a world known worker for peace.

The Temple of Peace at The Hague, the centenary of peace between England and the United States, the cosmopolitan movement in the colleges and universities and what it signifies for universal peace, the work of The Hague tribunal and other peace agencies—these are among the important topics gathered together in the bureau's bulletin, "The Promotion of Peace."

International Sentiment.
That the sentiment for observance of peace day in the schools is not confined to the United States, but is distinctly international, is shown in the words of M. Ruisson of Paris, quoted in the bulletin. He says:

"Peace day. Let it shine one day in the year among all nations. The whole year is consecrated, as it ought to be, to the promotion of love of country, to teaching our duties toward our native land, even to the extent of sacrificing ourselves for her."

"On this special day, however, it is in order not to forget our country, but to see her transfigured in the future, to see her lead in the movement which binds one nation to all others, making a sort of higher country, the federation of the United States of the civilized world."

QUEEN OF CROOKS REFORMS.

Mrs. Lyons-Burke to Devote Life and Fortune to Convicts.

Mrs. Sophie Lyons-Burke, known through almost the entire world for twenty-five years as the "queen of the crooks," recently astonished the police by announcing at Detroit, Mich., that she intended to reform and devote the remainder of her life and her fortune of $300,000 to an attempt to save first offenders from careers of crime.

"There is something I want more than property," she said. "That is the respect of the good people. Maybe I can get some of it by showing that I am not all bad and am sincere."

Mrs. Lyons-Burke will publish a book, "Why Crime Does Not Pay," which she will attempt to put into the hands of every convict in the United States as an educational effort to induce lawbreakers to mend their ways when they are released. She is sixty-eight years old and is the wife of Billy Burke, now in a Swedish prison.

CHURCH BROUGHT BY FLOOD.

Building, Complete With Bell, Dropped on Blannerhassett Island.

Historic Blannerhassett island, in the Ohio river, has fallen heir to a substantial frame church, with an 800 pound bell, which was deposited on the island by the river during the recent flood.

A few days before the water had receded the inhabitants managed to moor the big church building on a desirable spot, where it will in the future play the part it was built for in another place.

Nothing could be found about the building to indicate where it had come from. With the exception of the floor the church is in good condition.

Religiously inclined natives of the historic old island declare the church is "blessed they have cast upon the waters in former times returning to them."

Mohammedanism For Japan.
Mohammedans of India are planning an effort to Mohammedanize Japan. A strong deputation has been commissioned to study the situation, and the West advances toward spreading the religion in the mikado's empire will probably soon be made.

SAYS MALFORMATION OF NOSE CAUSES HEADACHES.

Paris Physician Makes Known a New Theory of Cure.

Persons who suffer from forms of headache often regarded as incurable will be interested in the announcement that a French physician has found a method of curing many such cases. The discoverer, the eminent Dr. Guisez of Paris, recently explained his theory and methods to the French Academy of Medicine.

Dr. Guisez finds that the frequent and annoying variety of migraine, which starts from above the eyes and spreads, often accompanied by nausea and vomiting, is really due to a malformation of the upper part of the nose known as hypertrophy of the middle horn, which under the least provocation causes congestion and a disturbance of circulation at the base of the brain.

Up to the present, owing to this cause being overlooked, all medical treatment, even the cutting of the nerves, has failed.

Dr. Guisez, however, by a slight operation, the details of which he gave to the academy, has found an easy remedy by which he has cured over seventy cases already. He recommends all persons suffering from frequent headaches to have a thorough examination made of the interior of the nose.

This communication is considered by the academy to be of great importance.

WOMAN IS A TENOR SINGER.

Miss Ruby Helder, "a Female Caruso," Visits America.

Miss Ruby Helder, an English girl who has a remarkable tenor voice, recently visited America. She made the trip solely to sing one group of songs at a reception given by Mrs. August Belmont in New York, and it is said that she received $10,000 for the musicale.

Miss Helder has frequently been heard in London during the last few months, and her voice is pronounced remarkable by critics, some of whom describe her as "a female Caruso." Her range goes up to high C.

Sir Joseph Santley, Miss Helder's teacher, says hers is the first voice of the kind he has heard in forty years. He predicts a great career for her.

Miss Helder is so small and frail that the masculine quality of her voice astonishes all who hear it for the first time. Specialists say it is due to the peculiar formation of the muscles in her throat. The girl began singing tenor when she was yet in short dresses at school. She first attracted public attention by singing in a London church choir.

NEW FREAKS OF FASHION.

Porcelain Heels and Pearls as Chin Straps Are the Latest.

From Paris, the source of nearly all fashions, wise and otherwise, comes the news that porcelain heels for silk or satin evening shoes are among the eccentricities to be expected before long. They will be made of sevens ware.

Another novel and none too lovely fashion is the wearing of strings of pearls somewhat after the manner of the guardsman's chin strap. The necklace passes under the chin of the wearer from ear to ear. It is sometimes fastened around the ear, but more frequently secured to the hair by a jeweled pin on either side.

Steel ornaments and brooches have been revived. Summer gowns will be made chiefly of moire damask and broches de laine. These new dress materials are charming in appearance and cheap.

HE BARS PRETTY TEACHERS.

They Attract Too Much Attention, Says Superintendent.

C. O. Williams, superintendent of the public schools at Richmond, Ind., believes school boards in selecting young women for their teaching corps should strike a medium between the very pretty and the very homely ones.

"Don't hire teachers who are extremely pretty or who are extremely homely," he told the township trustees recently. "Real pretty girls attract too much attention, and so do ugly ones. A teacher's appearance should be such as not to draw attention to her; therefore the beautiful women should be avoided."

SUFFRAGETTES ARE SUED.

Windows Broken in Recent Raids Made Basis of Claims.

A charge of conspiracy recently was brought against Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, English suffrage agitators, by ninety-three London shopkeepers whose windows were broken in the suffrage raids a few weeks ago. The claims entered amounted to almost $20,000.

Originally but two firms were cited as plaintiffs. Eventually, however, nearly all the prominent traders in the west end of London decided to combine in an effort to fix the responsibility for the destruction of their property.

"Endless Prayer" In Mail.
Postal inspectors at Philadelphia recently began investigating complaints of an "endless chain prayer" being sent by mail and containing threats of some calamity to befall persons who failed to comply with the requests set forth. This threat is a violation of the postal laws.

MOTIVES BACK OF WIDESPREAD STRIKE OF BELGIAN WORKMEN

Unequal Distribution of the Ballot Privilege Was the Cause of the Trouble.

Situation Gave Officials Little Concern at First, but Soon Grew Serious.

NOT in many years has the Belgian government faced such a serious situation as that created by the great "manhood suffrage" strike which was recently declared and which, according to conservative estimates, called 250,000 workmen from their employment almost instantly.

Although the strike had been announced in advance and extensive preparations had been made to offset its influence, the trouble quickly became more widespread than the officials had anticipated and the result in many districts was a complete stopping of all industry. Suffering and great inconvenience followed as natural consequences.

While much has been printed in this country about the disturbances little attention has been given to explaining the trouble back of the great strike.

The Strike Explained.

A concise and accurate explanation of the motive was stated as follows by one familiar with the circumstances:

"The strike is a protest against the refusal of the Belgian government to introduce the new franchise bill embodying equal and universal suffrage. The present Belgian house of representatives was elected on the principle of proportionate representation."

"That principle, in brief, is as follows: Every male Belgian who is twenty-five years old who has resided one year in his commune and who is not legally disqualified has one vote."

"If he is married or is a widower with children and pays $1 a year direct taxation he receives a second vote. Persons holding official positions, having university degrees or owning property worth a certain sum get two extra votes. No person, however, is permitted to use more than three votes."

"The Socialists want the entire system of plural voting abolished and demand that every Belgian citizen, male and female, over the age of twenty-one, be given one vote, and one vote only."

A Socialist Movement.

The beginning of the strike was a Socialist movement. The Catholic workmen, who have organizations of their own, did not sanction the strike. The Socialist leaders announced that it was to be a "strike of folded arms" and that no violence need be feared. In other words, the plan made in advance was to try to paralyze all industry in Belgium or as much as would be necessary to bring about a situation of extreme gravity.

The strike began at dawn April 14, when the night shifts quit the mines and mills throughout the country, leaving them empty save for a few caretakers told off by the Socialist party to keep the property from deteriorating.

At least a quarter of a million men laid down their tools, according to reports given out in representative non-Socialist quarters. There were numerous exceptions to the general walkout in many districts.

The strike was complete in places such as the mining districts, but only partial in the great seaport of Antwerp, where the shipping continued loading and unloading as though nothing had occurred.

Reports from the provinces told of complete or nearly complete stoppage of work at Liege, Charleroi, Mons, La Louviere and other smaller cities. At Mons alone it was estimated that there were 40,000 strikers and at La Louviere 26,000, most of them belonging to the metal, carriage building and tobacco trades.

Raoul Warocque, a deputy and mine owner, declared his intention of subscribing $10,000 daily to the strike fund.

Work Stopped at Liege.

Work ceased in the greater number of the industrial concerns at Liege and in the surrounding suburbs of Bressoux, Jupille, and Wandre. Of 3,500 workmen 1,400 remained at their machines.

In the national arms factory at Herstal the strike was complete. All the coal miners at Seraing, Jeumont, Tilleur, Montegnée, Flemalle-Haute, Flemalle-Grande and St. Nicholas stopped work.

Of the 35,000 coal miners in the Mons district all quit their work except 2,000, who kept the machinery running. All the manufactories also were idle, including the machine shops and potteries.

The suspension of work at the coal mines in the Charleroi district was complete the first day, except that sufficient men remained at their posts to keep the machinery in good order and the pumps working. The metal workers only partially quit. The total number on strike at Charleroi was 29,000 out of 78,836 employees in the various trades.

La Louviere Idle.

Twenty strikers were arrested for interfering with workers.

The miners' strike at La Louviere was general the first morning, not a man beyond those necessary to keep the machinery in order going into the mines. All the factories closed their doors except a pottery.

Some attempts were made to cut telegraph wires in the vicinity.

The potteries in the Ghent neighborhood were all silent, but in the linen and cotton mills something more than half the hands remained at work, except in two cases, where all quit. The metal workers also went out, but a few cement mixers continued work.

The strike, which had appeared not to affect Antwerp in any way early in the morning, set in during the forenoon, when there was a partial suspension of work by the dock laborers. The movement also extended to other branches.

The stoppage of work at Tournai was only partial in the quarries and coal mines, while at the factories nearly the full complement of workers went into the shops.

Growth of the Strike.

The full force of the strike was not felt at Antwerp for the reason that the steamship companies, forewarned, diverted so much of their shipping to other cities that there was little work to do at the Antwerp docks. The strikers also adopted a similar plan in advance, all of them saving funds and provisions and those who could afford to do so sending their families to France or other countries for a time.

By the evening of the third day the officials admitted that the strike was spreading and that at least 310,000 men were idle. Some estimates put the number as high as 370,000. Premier Broqueville, speaking in the parliament at Brussels, put the number at 350,000. Estimates of conservative journals reduced the total to a few hundred less than 300,000.

More than 10,000 strikers surrounded the national hall of legislation, but there was no violence. Several hundred paraded the capital without police interference.

In answer to Socialist and Liberal attacks in the chamber the premier declared that the government could not yield to threats. When a Liberal deputy proposed a national referendum on constitutional revision the premier said:

"When quiet is restored the government will be at your disposal to study out the question."

Bruges Workers Quit.

The dock strike spread to Bruges, and 200 men loading the German steamer Wiegand stopped work. The Bruges manufacturers posted notices calling attention to the impossibility of filling the orders on hand, as their workmen were on strike. They pointed out that no new orders were coming in and that many of their customers were placing their orders abroad, thus adding to the dislocation of industry and increasing the loss caused by the strike both to employee and employer.

At Antwerp the dock strike extended to coal unloaders at the Central basins. The burgomaster predicted that work at the port would be at a complete standstill in a few days for lack of freights. The arrivals of cereals, timber and similar cargo at the railroad freight depot rapidly became scarcer. A band of women gathered in front of the Socialist co-operative storehouse, protesting against work being performed there during the strike. The police dispersed them.

At Ghent 1,500 more men joined the strike, bringing the total there to 18,000, of whom 8,000 marched in the streets. There was no disorder.

Of the 208,000 workmen in the provinces of Hainault and Namur 163,000 walked out, according to officials.

Violence Reported.

The promise of the leaders to carry on a peaceable strike was not kept because of the refusal of the workmen in some districts to obey orders. On the fourth day of the walkout bands of young men went through the workmen's residential district in Seraing, breaking windows in the homes of men who had refused to quit work.

Other bands occupied the roads leading to the city and stopped gangs of men who were entering the city from outlying villages with the intention of going to work.

Even when acts of violence were reported in Brussels the government obstinately refused to yield to the Socialists' demands. The police had a hard time in the suburbs of Brussels, where strikers bought nippers and rubber gloves with the intention of cutting wires and wrecking electrical machinery.

The seriousness of the situation became apparent when officials announced that they were almost out of coal and that the stopping of railroad transportation and the shutting down of gas and electric plants seemed inevitable.

Facing this extremity, however, the government refused to yield. In all proposals of a national referendum on constitutional revision the premier merely reiterated:

"The government considers itself threatened and cannot yield. When quiet is restored it will be at your disposal."

MOVING PICTURES USED TO KEEP RECORDS OF CROOKS.

Philadelphia Tries Out the Plan of "Mugging" Criminals by Films.

The Philadelphia police department is the first in America, if not in the world, to give moving pictures a trial as a means of making photographs for its rogues' gallery. The department recently arranged with a film manufacturing company for a series of experiments, and if exhaustive trials prove the "movies" to be satisfactory they probably will replace the present Bertillon finger print system of identifying criminals.

By the system a criminal may be identified by some peculiarity in his actions. A notorious criminal will be made to walk before the picture camera so that a good view of him can be had from all angles. Five feet of film will be used for each subject.

After the film is developed it will be placed in a motion picture machine in the detectives' roll room, and the assembled sleuths will see on the white screen before them the man who "acted" for the machine.

Criminal identification by means of motion pictures also is being considered by the New York police department. The suggestion of such a method was made to Commissioner Waldo by a man prominent in the motion picture world.

It is said that five feet of film, costing 70 cents, will suffice as a means of identifying criminals in the future. With photographs, finger prints and motion pictures, together with the Bertillon measurements, it was suggested that it would be next to impossible for criminals to escape.

IDEAL HUSBAND DESCRIBED.

Kansas College Girls Tell What He Must Be Like.

College girls of Kansas have fixed the standard of the ideal young man, the possible husband, and the specifications of the paragon are posted in College Young Women's Christian association buildings throughout the state.

Here is the list:

Height five feet eleven inches.

Weight 150 pounds.

Chest forty inches expanded, thirty-four inches contracted.

Waist thirty and one-half inches.

Must make a good appearance, but need not be handsome.

Must be careful of personal appearance, but not a dandy.

Must be jolly, accommodating, considerate and a true sportsman.

Must be a good conversationalist but not a flatterer.

Must revere and respect the aged.

Must show courtesy to men and women.

Must not smoke, drink or be guilty of attendant evils.

Must not sneer at religion or jokingly of it.

Must not recognize a different standard for men and women.

The physical qualifications were the averages taken from the reports of hundreds of girls of the state, each girl being asked to submit the measurements of what she considered her ideal man.

The nine commandments for the ideal young man were chosen from hundreds of statements of girls who were asked to specify the requirements each would make, and the nine items most mentioned in the letters were the ones taken as the average ideal young man.

CHINESE SCHOOL IN ITALY.

Teacher Wouldn't Go to China, So It Went to Him.

Luigi Luzzati, a former premier of Italy, recently was asked by the Chinese government to be its adviser in matters of political economy, agriculture and finance.

He consented, but refused to go to China. Being very desirous of obtaining his services, the Chinese government then proposed to send its young statesmen students to Italy if a school could be provided for them there. This will be done, with Luzzati in charge of the institution.

AMERICAN BIRDS NEARLY EXTINCT

Some Valuable Species Already Gone, Scientists Say.

BETTER GAME LAWS URGED.

Only Long Closed Seasons Will Save Wild Life of the Country, Is Experts' Opinion—Destruction of Insect Eaters Causing Big Loss to Farmers—Startling Facts Presented.

That American birds, like the American bison, soon will be extinct unless immediate measures are taken for their protection is the prediction of an investigator who recently set forth his views in the Chicago Record-Herald.

Ornithologists and sportsmen for several years have been calling attention to the same fact and have repeatedly pointed out that better game laws must be passed and rigidly enforced if we are to save the wild life of our country.

The robins, whose arrival in the north is considered one of the first authentic signs of spring, are being slaughtered by tens of thousands every year, authorities say. In fact, no bird, from humming bird to eagle, is safe from the craze to kill.

As for the so called game birds, the ducks and snipe and prairie chickens, they are already so scarce that their busy haunts of twenty years ago are silent and deserted today. Some species are already extinct, and many others are almost gone, yet the sportsmen who make our game laws refuse to save any of the vanishing species by the only possible means—a long closed season. Emerson Hough, who is a citizen first and a sportsman afterward, frankly writes:

"Our game laws have failed, and we know they have failed. Our game is almost gone, and we know it is almost gone. America has changed, and we know it has changed, although we have not changed with it. We have handed our game in a wholly greedy, unscrupulous and selfish fashion. This has been our policy as a nation."

Loss to Farmers.

The game of North America does not belong exclusively to the men who kill. The other 97 per cent of the people have vested rights in it far exceeding those of the 3 per cent.

Farmers are already suffering millions of loss from insects that used to be kept within bounds by the quail and other birds. Yet at the present moment we are permitting the extermination of our finest species of birds, mammals and fishes "according to law."

"There is not a single state in our country," says William T. Hornaday, director of the New York zoological park, "from which the killable game is not being rapidly and persistently shot to death, legally or illegally, very much more rapidly than it is breeding, with the extermination of most of it in sight. We have reached the point where the alternatives are long closed seasons or a gameless continent, and we must choose one or the other speedily."

Startling Facts Cited.

Mr. Hornaday has written a book, "Our Vanishing Wild Life," in which he sets forth some startling facts. Here are some figures he compiled:

In 1860 pot hunters in Hartford, Mich., shipped three carloads of dead passenger pigeons to market each day for forty days, making a total of 11,880,000 birds. Another Michigan town marketed 15,840,000 in two years.

Today the passenger pigeon is totally extinct save for one lonely female bird twenty years old in the Cincinnati zoological gardens. The greed of man has wiped it from the face of the earth, and, like the great auk, it must be numbered with the dead species.

Other species that have been exterminated in our own day are the Labrador duck, the pallas cormorant, the Eskimo curlew, the Cuban macaw, the Carolina parakeet and the yellow winged green parrot.

Mr. Hornaday names more than twenty-five other North American birds that are threatened with early extermination. He says it is already too late to save the stately white whooping crane and the trumpeter swan. Three of the most beautiful and curious water haunting birds of the southern United States—the flamingo, scarlet ibis and roseate spoon-bill—are doomed unless the European feather trade can be stopped from having them shot into total oblivion. The upland plover, black capped petrel and California condor are about gone.

The wood duck, one of the most exquisitely plumaged birds in America, is threatened with extinction. Yet many states are actually encouraging its destruction by giving extra long open seasons for the killing of this species.

Birds Were Shipped.

For forty years the marshes, prairies, farms and streams of the whole upper Mississippi valley have been combed over year after year by the guns of the market shooter.

Often the migratory game was located by telegraphic reports. Game birds were slain by the wagon load, boatload, barrel and carload "for the Chicago market." And the farmers of the middle west stolidly plowed their fields and fed their hogs and permitted the slaughter to go on.

CHAPTER XI.

The Art of Dr. Jamieson.

LEANING against the pillar of the gallery, Dunwoody watched them all—old friends, late foes—depart. Josephine St. Auban stood not far away. He turned to her, and her gaze fell upon his face, now haggard and gaunt.

"You are ill," she said to him impulsively. "You're badly hurt."

"Aren't you glad to see me suffer?" he asked grimly.

"I am not glad to see any one suffer."

"Well, never mind about me. But now, you, yourself, didn't I tell you to go to your room and rest?"

She was pale, the corners of her mouth were drawn, her eyes were duller. Neither had she slept. She also suffered even now. Yet her courage matched his own. She smiled.

"It makes me crawl all the way through to see a woman hurt that way. Why did you try to climb out of that window? You weren't walking in your sleep."

"I was trying to get away from you. I thought you were coming. I thought I heard you—at the door." She looked him full in the face, searching it for sign of guilt, of confusion. "Was it not enough?" she asked.

The frown on his face only deepened. "That was not true," said he. "I never came to your door. It was Sally you heard. I'll confess—I sent her to get away those—those clothes you saw. I didn't want—you to see them."

"I believe you," she said low, as if she spoke to herself. "Yes, I understand now. I was mistaken."

"How do you know? Why forgive me? I don't want you to forgive me. I am degraded forever."

"Tell me," she flashed out upon him suddenly, "what did you think then of me there on the boat? How did you dare?"

"I don't think I had any conclusion. I only wanted you. I just couldn't think of your going away, that was all. I'd never seen a woman like you. I'll never hope to see another your equal in all my life. And you sent for me, told me to come, said you needed help. I didn't know what you were. But I didn't care what you were either. I don't care now. I wanted you. I'll never in all my life cease to want you."

"But what is the right thing to do now?" he resumed shortly. "Parole? Hostage? I don't need to tell you I'm the prisoner now. My future, my character, are absolutely in your hands. The fact that I have insulted a woman can be proved. It is with you what revenge you will take. As a lawyer, I point out to you that the courts are open. You easily can obtain redress there against Warville Dunwoody. And your relatives or friends will of course hold me accountable."

"Then you fear me?"

"No. What comes, comes. I am afraid of no one in the world but my own self. I fear only the dread of facing life—of looking about me here, in my own home, and not seeing, not hearing you. Tell me, when will your lawyers call on me?"

"Never at all," she answered at last. "What do you mean?" he demanded. "To let me off so easily? Oh, no."

"Never fear. You shall pay me ransom, and heavily, out of your own character. I shall exact it a hundred-fold—in shame, in regret—of you. You love my body. You do not love my mind. I love them both. Yes, I am a student of the law. Humanity! Is it not larger than we? Is this narrow, selfish life of yours all you can see of life, of the higher law?"

"Yes," said Dunwoody, grinning painfully. "I reckon maybe it was one of those 'higher law' abolitionists that shot me!"

"Shot? What do you mean?" Even as she spoke she now for the first time caught sight of the dark rimmed rent in his trousers leg, noted the uneasy fashion in which he held his weight erect.

"No one told me you were hurt; I thought you only tired, or perhaps bruised by some accident, when you fell in there."

"No; shot," he replied. "Shot right in here, through the edge of the bone. When I tripped and fell, there in the hall, I broke the bone short off. It was only nicked at first."

"And you have been standing here, talking to me, with that?" She stepped to him swiftly and placed a hand under his arm. "You must go in. Come. Can you walk?"

Through his nerves, racked as they were, there swept a flood of joy, more sweet than that of any drug. She put her free arm under his, forgetful of everything in her woman's wish to allay suffering, to brood, to protect, to increase life. They passed through the door toward the foot of the stairs. Here she turned to him.

"The pain is very great?" she inquired.

"The pain at thinking of your going away is very great," he answered.

One hand on the newest post, he bent down, his head on his arm for an instant. "Oh, you're making me pay," he groaned. But the next moment he turned on her defiantly. "I'll not learn! If this was the only way for me to meet you then I'll not regret a single thing I've done. I'll not! I'll not! It all comes back to me, just what I said before. What couldn't we do, together? I need you. I need you!"

"You must go to your room. You've been standing for an hour."

"But I've been with you. I can't hope for another hour like this. You'll be leaving me. But I'll live the hour over again—in hell with you!"

"I told you when we all gave parole that I would exact my price of you in regret, in remorse."

"You shall not have it in regret. I'll not regret. But I'm paying! See, I'm telling you you may go, that you must go—away from me."

Eleazar proved a faithful messenger once more. Before the evening shadows had greatly lengthened three figures appeared at the lower end of the approach to Tallwoods mansion house. Jeanne, as usual looking out from their windows, saw these.

"It is the old man, madame," she commented. "And, yes, Monsieur le Docteur at last—thank the Bon Dieu! But one other—who is that?"

It was a very worn and weary doctor who presently swung out of his saddle at the gallery step. His clothing was stained with mud, his very shoulders drooping with fatigue. None the less he smiled as he held out his hand to Josephine.

"How is my patient?" he inquired. "Plumb well, of course. And how about this new one—I thought I fixed him up before he came home. I've been grunting at Eleazar all the way, telling him it's all foolishness, my coming away out here—he could have fixed Dunwoody's leg up, somehow. I suppose you know the old man's son, Hector. He came along for good measure, I reckon."

The young man referred to now advanced, made a leg and pulled a black forelock. He was a strapping youth, attired in the latest fashion of French St. Genevieve. He bowed to this lady; but at the same time he cast a glance at her French waiting maid.

"Mr. Dunwoody has had a fall, here in the house," said Josephine. "He thinks he has broken the injured bone. I didn't know for a long time that he had been shot. He stood out here last night talking to me."

"Stood out here—talking to you—with his leg broken through—the front bone? Couldn't you have any mercy? You didn't have to use that broken wrist, but he—standing around!"

"He did not tell me until the last moment. He said he thought he had a little fever and believed he would take a little quinine."

"I did the best I could with it—out there in the dark, but it wasn't half dressed. Come!" He motioned Josephine to follow him to Dunwoody's room.

Eleazar had slunk away about the house, but Hector, left alone with Jeanne, improved the shining hour. He was a cooper and had a most excellent business, youder at St. Genevieve. But the society of St. Genevieve—ah, well! And so on, very swimmingly.

Jamieson shook his head over the results of his first scrutiny. He turned to Josephine. "Have you ever seen anybody hurt?"

"I've been on two battlefields," said she. "I've nursed a little."

Dunwoody turned to her a face whose eyes now were glazed with suffering. He nodded to Jamieson without any word.

"Sally, get some hot water, quick!" called out Jamieson in the hall. "So, now, old man, let's see."

He stripped the covering quite down and bared the lower limb, removing the bandage which he had originally applied. For a moment he looked at the angry wound. Then he pulled back the covering and turned away.

"Well, what is it?" croaked Dunwoody hoarsely, half rising on his crumpled pillow. Jamieson did not reply.

"If that leg were mine do you know what I'd do with it?"

"No; but it isn't yours."

"Well, I'd have it off as quick as it would come, that's all. If you don't you'll lose your life."

"You don't mean that?" whispered Dunwoody tensely, after a time.

"I mean every word I say. Its blood poisoning."

The only answer his patient made was to reach a slow hand under his pillow and draw out a long barreled revolver, which he laid upon the bed beside him.

"I didn't think you such a coward," ruminated Jamieson, rubbing his chin. "If you think I'm afraid of the hurt of it I'll let you do your work first and I'll do mine afterward," gasped Dunwoody slowly. "But I'm not going to live a cripple. I'll not be maimed."

They looked each other firmly in the face.

"Is it so bad as all that, doctor?" demanded Josephine. Her answer was a sad look from the gray old eyes. "Blood poison. Some kind of an aggravation. It's traveling fast."

Dunwoody turned his gaze on Josephine now. "You don't belong here now," said he at length. "You'd better go away."

"This is just where she does belong," contradicted Jamieson. "If she has courage to stay here I want her. I've got to have help. She'll do her duty and with one hand tied. Can't you do as much? Haven't you any idea of duty in the world?"

"Duty," Dunwoody's lips met in a bitter smile.

"Listen here, Mr. Dunwoody," began Josephine. "I've seen worse wounds than that, seen weaker men survive worse than that. There's a chance perhaps. Why don't you take it like a man? I exact it of you. I demand it. Your duty to me is unpaid. Come. We must live, all of us, till all our debts are paid."

He made no answer at first save to look her straight in the face for a moment. "Maybe there is such a thing as duty," said he. "Maybe I do owe it—to you. I've—not yet—paid enough. Very well, then."

"Come," cried out Jamieson suddenly, "out you go on the table. Get a hand under there, girl."

There was no word further spoken. Gently they aided the injured man to his feet and helped him hobble through the hall and into the great dining room beyond, where stood the long table of polished mahogany. Dunwoody, swaying, leaned against it, while Jamieson hurried to the window and threw up the curtains to admit as much as possible of the light of late afternoon. Returning, he motioned Dunwoody to remove his coat, which he folded up for a pillow. The remainder of his preparations necessarily were scant—hot water, clean instruments, that was all. An anaesthetic was, of course, out of the question.

"Dunwoody, we're going to hurt you a little," said Jamieson at last. "You've got to stand it, that's all. Lie down there on the table and get ready."

He himself turned his back and was busy nearby at a smaller table arranging his instruments. Next he went out to the front door and called aloud for Eleazar.

"Come here, man," commanded Jamieson after he had the old trapper in the room. "Take hold of this good leg and hold it still. Madam, I want you at the foot on the other side. You may get hold of the edge of the table with your hands, Dunwoody, and hold still if you can. I won't be very long."

Swiftly the doctor cut away the garments from the wounded limb, which lay now exposed in all the horrors of its inflammation. The next instant there was a tense tightening of the muscles of the man on the table. There was a sigh of deep intaken breath, followed, however, by no more than a faint moan as the knife went at its work.

"I'm not going to do it!" came back from under the surgeon's arm. "There's half a chance—I'm going to try to save it! Hold on, old man—here's the thing to do—we're going to try!"

He went down now into the quivering tissues and laid bare the edge of the broken bone, deep to the inner lines. Thus the front of the shattered bone lay exposed. The doctor sighed as he pushed at this with a steady finger, his eyes frowning, absorbed. The bullet wound in the anterior edge was not clean cut. Near it was a long, heavy splinter of bone, the cause of the inflammation—something not suspected in the hurried dressing of the wound in the half darkness at the river edge. This bone end, but loosely attached, was broken free, thrust down into the angry and irritated flesh.

For an instant Jamieson studied the injury. The silence of death was in the room. The tense muscles of the patient might have been those of a lifeless man. Only the horrid sound of the dripping blood, falling from the table upon the carpet, broke the silence.

"I had a coon dog once," began Dr. Jamieson cheerfully. "I don't know whether you remember him or not. Dunwoody. Sort of a yellow dog, with long ears and white eye. Just wait a minute." He hastened over to the side of the table and bent again over his case of instruments.

"There's been all kinds of coon dogs in these bottoms and hills, I suppose ever since white folk came here, but Dunwoody, I'm telling you the truth that dog of mine!"

By this time he had fished out from his case a slender probe, which he bent back and forth as he once more approached the table.

"There wasn't anything he wouldn't run, from deer to catamount, and one day, when we were out back here in the hills—I don't know but Eleazar here might remember something about that himself. * * * Hold on, now, old man!"

The old doctor's forehead for the first time was beaded. He wanted silver wire. He would have accepted catgut. He had neither. For one moment, in agony himself, he looked about; then a look of joy came to his face. An old hodie was lying in the window. A moment, and he had ripped off a string.

Dr. Jamieson's story of his famous coon dog was never entirely completed. His voice droned away and ceased now as he bent once more over his work.

What he did, so far as he in his taciturn way ever would admit, was in some way to poke the catgut violin string under the bone, with the end of the probe and so to pass a ligature around the broken bone itself. After that it was easier to fasten the splinter back in place where it belonged.

"I'm only a backwoods doctor, Dunwoody," said Jamieson at length as he began rebandaging the limb. "But with what's at hand I've done the best I could. Wait now until I get some splints—hold still, can't you! If we have to cut your leg off after while I can do a better job than this, maybe. But now we have all done the best we could."

The face of Josephine St. Auban was wholly colorless as once more she assisted the doctor with his patient. They got him upon his own bed at last. To Dunwoody's imagination, although he could never settle it clearly in his mind, it seemed that a hand had pushed the hair back from his brow; that some one perhaps had arranged a pillow for him.

When at last Josephine found her own room she discovered her maid Jeanne, waiting for her, fright still in her face.

"Madame," exclaimed Jeanne, "it is terrible. What horrors there are in this place. What has been done? Is it true that monsieur has lost both his legs? Is it not true how God punishes the wicked? For myself, I was in terror, even though I was some distance away, and although that young gentleman, M. Hector, was so good as to hold my hand."

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

THE CHEESE

Mystery Solved on

The customer had long at the hospital certain hotel, says when he noticed some about his plate of ton and bread.

He watched it very some time, then with a look on his face, called lustily waiter.

"Waiter!" he cried, "remove this cheese."

"Beg pardon, sir," said the waiter; "can I bring you any other kind?"

"Remove this cheese, I tell you."

"We've some fine Gorgonzola, sir."

"L'll—great Jupiter, man!—if you don't remove it immediately I'll call the police!"

"Sorry, sir," said the now terrified waiter. "Is there anything wrong?"

"Wrong! wrong! Can't you see it's eating all my bread?"

SETTLING UP.

"I say quacks, I've got a claim against that feed!"

"Well put in your bill."

Not Mere Curiosity.

The world has a store of pleasures in waiting for the unaccustomed traveler. Sometimes, indeed, they may be mostly in anticipation, as was the case with Amos Riggs, of Plumtown.

"How d'ye do?" said Mr. Riggs cordially to the stern-visaged man who was his seatmate in the car on the occasion of Mr. Riggs' first trip to Boston. "Now what might your name be? Do you live in Nashua or beyond?"

"I should like to know what business it is of yours where I live or who I am?" said his companion crossly.

"Well, now, it ain't any particular business of mine, strictly speaking," said Mr. Riggs mildly, "but it's just like this: I've got a cousin up in Canada that I've never seen, and I've always thought I might come upon him some time just by askin' folks their name and so on."

Rules For Guests.

Guests are requested not to speak to the dumb waiter.

Guests wishing to get up without being called can have self-raising flour for supper.

The hotel is supported by a beautiful cemetery; hearses to hire, 25 cents a day.

Guests wishing to do a little driving will find hammer and nails in the closet.

If the room gets too warm, open the windows and see the fire escape.

If you're fond of athletics and like good jumping, lift the mattress and see the bed spring.

If your lamp goes out, take a feather out of the pillow; that's light enough for any room.

Any one troubled with nightmare will find a halter on the bedpost.

Don't worry about paying your bill; the house is supported by the foundation.

It All Depends.

John and Pat were two friendly workmen who were constantly tilting, each one trying to outwit the other.

"Are you good at measurement?" asked John.

"I am that," said Pat, quickly.

"Then could you tell me how many shirts I could get out of a yard?" asked John.

"Sure," said Pat, "that depends on whose yard you got into."

Where to Apply It.

An elderly gentleman was riding on a street car the other day. A boy began to laugh, and laughed so he couldn't stop. The old gentleman told his mother that the boy needed a spanking, and she replied that she didn't believe in spanking on an empty stomach; whereupon the man said: "Neither do I; turn him over."

Natural Selection.

"Father," asked Scribbler's little son, "why do poets wear turn-down collars?"

"It's a habit they acquire, my son, from their experience with editors."

His Lass.

Little Boston Girl—Are you a cot-tager?

Little Harlem Boy—No, I'm a flat-terer.

No Alternative.

The Mother—If he proposes to-day, tell him he just speak to me. If he doesn't propose, tell him I want to speak to him.
